The Shriners Banquet

Ballot Abjad Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, held their annual banquet following initiation, Thursday evening at the Masonic Temple. There were two hundred and forty-five guests present, and they were received by the officers of the Shrine and escorted into the banquet hall. Decorations and favors of red roses were particularly attractive. The menu, which was exceptionally delicious, follows:

Crab Cocktail
Celery
Consomme
Roast Turkey and Dressing
Baked Potatoes
Current Jelly
Vienna Rolls
Fruit Salad
Ice Cream
Assorted Nuts
Cakes
Cigars

The menu cards were very attractive, having on the cover a cut of Noble Hubert Perry, the illustrious Potentate and the Shriners' emblem in mother-of-pearl.

Noble Perry spoke a few words of greeting, and introduced Judge Edward A. Mann, the toastmaster of the occasion, who presided with his usual ease of manner.

The toast which was responded to with exceptionally clever remarks, were as follows:

"The Ladies"—Noble Isaac Barth.
"The Novices"—Noble A. B. McMillan.

"The Shriners in High Places"—Noble Alvin A. White of Santa Fe.

"Past Potentates"—Noble Tom Wilkerson.

The Black-Wilson orchestra played for the ball, which followed the banquet, and dancing continued until a late hour.

The affair throughout was an especially happy and enjoyable one.

Mrs. Marron's Tea

One of the most delightful affairs held in some time was the Catholic tea, which Mrs. O. N. Marron gave Tuesday afternoon at her charming home on North Eighth street.

Many baskets filled with pink sweet peas and bridal wreath hung in the archways between the rooms.

The dining room was exceptionally attractive. The shades were down and the room was brightened with floral lights and candles. The electric dome was festooned with smilax and the candle shades were green.

The table was covered with a beautiful drawnwork centerpiece and sparkled with silver and cut glass. A basket of pink sweet peas and smilax was the lovely centerpiece.

Mrs. Clark M. Carr and Mrs. Jacobo Yrizarri poured and the delicious refreshments were served by Misses Virginia Carr, Jane Congrove, Eleanor Marron, Julia Kelsner and Eleanor Vaughney.

The home-cooking table, in charge of Mrs. S. Halling, and the apron table, where Mrs. John Hordich presided, were exceptionally inviting at the beginning of the afternoon, but were soon relieved of their displays.

Mrs. Marron was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. James Phelan, Mrs. J. B. Herndon, Mrs. Lucy Owen and Mrs. Felix Baca.

While the affair was a most gratifying financial success it lacked the somewhat businesslike atmosphere that many church teas have and proved to be an entirely pleasant social occasion.
